A Christmas Poem.

On Christmas day, with one accord, We sing the praises of our Lord; Who came on earth the world to free-Said "Little children come to me."

We come to-day with joyous glee, To gather fruits from the Christman tree, And thank the denors for their pains; Wishing them all sternal gains.

A mem'ry grows. like little rille Which gush from Arizona's hills' The mem'ry of this day will last, The awestest joy of all the past.

On Ocean's far off sounding shore, When time and we shall be no more, The dove will seek its mother's nest; And little childrens be at rest.

On God's eternal judgement day, The little children all will play Around His throng with joyful glee, And gather fruits from the Christmas tree. -C. D. POSTON.
